The Village of Suttons Bay lays midway on the eastern shore of the Leelanau Peninsula. This year “voted coastal village” has been known for books since the early 19th century when its harbor was used as a port by schooners transporting lumber from the area to the emerging metropolises of the nation. We are a sparsely populated community with a lot to offer to visitors. The shops are supported by a diverse range of industries. The village has a rich history, and the historic homes of the residents have been preserved. Many of the homes in the historic district are open to the public, and they offer guided tours. The village is also known for its vineyards and wineries, which provide visitors with a taste of the local wine. In addition to the vineyards and wineries, the village also has a variety of specialty shops, art galleries, and restaurants. The community also offers a variety of outdoor activities, including hiking, biking, and kayaking. The village is a great place to relax and enjoy the beauty of the natural surroundings. If you’re looking for a quiet and peaceful place to spend a few days, the Village of Suttons Bay is a great option.
